

I read in an article in the Petersburg Times (Florida) today that finally the USDA is proposing a rule change regarding these delicious and superior tomatoes whereby the Florida Tomato Committee will not be able to restrict their sale.

I have been writing to anyone who has any political influence regarding this product since February 2005 stating that as a consumer I find it positively un-American to restrict the sale of a product solely on its appearance. If I, as a consumer, wish to pay the price for these tomatoes, that should definitely be my choice. They are so far superior to any other tomato sold in the grocery store that I have refused to purchase the flavorless so called tomatoes that the FTC approves since their arbitrary ruling.

This e-mail is my enthusiastic endorsement in favor of Ugly Ripe Tomatoes.

Sincerely,
Jane A. McFarlain
2014 Golf Terrace Drive
Tallahassee, FL 32301
magmaid@aol.com